

Photo by EVENING LEDGER Staff Photographer.
EDDYSTONE WORKERS REFUSE TO ENTER ILL-FATED PLANT
 Men and women gathered this morning about the gates of the Eddystone Ammunition Corporation, over which the half-staffed flag fluttered. They endeavored to persuade less timorous employees from resuming work.

Photo by EVENING LEDGER Staff Photographer.
CONVALESCENT EXPLOSION VICTIMS IN CHESTER ARMORY
 The more seriously injured powder workers were sent to hospitals, while the "commandeered" force of nurses, Boy Scouts and other emergency helpers ministered to the other surviving victims.

Photo by EVENING LEDGER Staff Photographer.
IMPROVISED COTS IN THE ARMORY HOSPITAL
 Invalid chairs, even boxes, were requisitioned to provide for the capacity-taxing influx of injured men and women rushed to every available building after the explosion.

Photo by EVENING LEDGER Staff Photographer.
"WELL, WE BOTH GOT OUT IN A HURRY"
 EVENING LEDGER informs injured workman "just how it happened."

Photo by EVENING LEDGER Staff Photographer.
NO MORE AMMUNITION MAKING FOR US
 Men who were with others. They are

Photo by EVENING LEDGER Staff Photographer.
HEROIC CORPS OF NURSES AND PHYSICIANS
 This band of workers was recruited from hospitals in Chester, Delaware, and other places after the explosion.